Four Cities Vie for Consideration at the NDTA 2012 Forum Site Selection Meeting

The voice of Defense Transportation

[Alexandria, VA. Sept. 3, 2008] --- The annual National Defense Transportation Association (NDTA) Forum & Expo kicks off in Reno / Tahoe, Nevada on Sunday, Sept. 21st. That same day, the destination of the 2012 NDTA event will be under consideration as the Forum Site Selection Committee convenes from 1 - 3PM, in Bonanza A on the 2nd floor of the John Ascuaga's Nugget Casino Resort, East Tower.

Four cities will vie for the distinction: Long Beach, CA, known for its vibrant container port; Palms Springs, CA, premier West Coast leisure destination; New Orleans, LA, home to the French Quarter and "Cajun Flavor"; and Washington, DC, a location that needs no introduction to folks involved in the business of Defense Transportation. The final vote comes from a committee designated by NDTA President, Ken Wykle and the Forum Education & Professional Development Committee Chairman, Greg Reid of YRC Worldwide.

Site Selection Committee participants reflect all Association segments: long time and newly joining members, corporate members of all modes, active duty and retired service personnel. The broad demographic prompts a balanced decision to best meet Association needs. Identical criteria are used to evaluate bidding cities - hotel rates, availability and exhibit hall space are benchmarks. Travel connections and city attractiveness are additional factors.

If you plan to join the Forum in Reno / Tahoe, you are invited to experience this time-honored tradition. The winning city will be announced at the close of the Forum on Sept. 24, Wednesday.
